WAR IN THE ARMY OF PEACE.

During Coxey's Absence His Two Lieutenants Engage in a Clash of Authority.

SMITH OUSTS BROWNE AND CONTROLS

The Latter Ordered Repeated Halls in Or. der to Address the Moustaineers...The Former Ordered Army to "March."

FROSTBURG, MD., April 14 .- A revolt in the ranks of the Coxey army to-day leaves the band of peace in a state bor-dering on riot. Chief Marshal Browne has been deposed by the army as the marshal of the Commonweal, and the famous "Unknown," Louis Smith, is in full charge. Gen. Coxey has been absent for several days, and does not know of this row. The affair occurred just as the army was entering this town this evening. and was the result of jealousy between Browne and Smith.

CAUSE OF THE TROUBLE.

On leaving Grantsville this morning the army moved rapidly over the Great Meadow mountain on to the Big Savage mountain. According to the men, the march was made very laborious by the repeated calls to halt ordered by Browne, who would at each propriet class achieves. who would at each stopping place address gatherings of mountaineers. During one of these halts Smith inadvertemly ordered the men to march on. Browne cried out to them to halt, and then arose a war of words between the two chiefs. Browne threatened all manner of punishment, but finally leaped into Mr. Coxey's chalse and drove off at a gallop.

BROWNE'S CRUELTY TO ANIMALS. The army proceeded, and two miles further on met Browne standing by the roadside, one of the horses lying exhaustroadside, one of the horses lying exhaust-ed on the road. The team is valued at $7,000. Browne, as soon as the army came up, seized a horse and rode ahead, leav-ing the prestrate animal lying where it had fallen. On reaching the town the horses and all the baggage were put un-der guard and made subject to the order der guard, and made subject to the order of either Marshal Smith or Jesse A. Coxey, son of the commander of the Commonweal, who supports Smith in his

DON'T LIKE BROWNE ANYHOW. This evening Browne has been tele-taphing to all points to reach Mr. Coxey. He refuses to state whether an answer has been received, but says he will make a statement later. The men all say they will not obey Browne again, as he is too officious and bullying with them. teo officious and bullying with them. This town regards the army with apprehension, and has made preparations to get them out as quickly and safely as

Kites

As the spring days approach, young people's minds turn to kites. There are, of course, many different shapes and kinds, but there are not many which can be relied upon, and these few are the only ones that it will be worth the only ones that it will be worth our while discussing. The very best workour while discussing. The very best working kite, and the easiest to make, is the cross kite. To make this take two pine sticks, one measuring 31-2 feet, and the other 2 feet, and cross them at right angles 11-2 feet below the top of the kite. The two sticks should be 3-4x1-2 trakes. In disparate, tapeting to 1-4x1-4. inches in diameter, tapering to 1-4x1-4 inches at the extremities. Last them together with strong cord (waxed). Half an inch from the top of each stick bore a small hole. Pass a strong cord through one of the holes and tie it around the one of the holes and tie it around the end of the sticks, pass to the end of next stick, and fasten, and so on entirely around the outer edge of the frame. Regarding the covering of a kite, do not use paper, but substantial paper-muslin, which can be bought of any color you desire. Turn your cloth over the edges of the string and sew twice around (this takes away all danger of ripping). The fine point in making a kite fity well is fine point in making a kite fly well is in the hanging of the chest-band. In the draft representing the cross kite you will see that the chest-band has four leaders, while the face and star kite have six. Arrange all the leaders so that they will meet about three feet from the kite, and all the strain will be divided equally among them. By tightening the leaders more on one side than on the other a kite can be made to veer to either side as desired. By this means one person can handle three small kites, and have the three strings lead to one point. The top or bow kite in the above illustration is made the same as the cross kite, but has in addition the half of a split nour-barrel hoop; this is lashed to the top and ends of the cross-piece.—Harper's

A new fad has lately been introduced om England that gloves shall not be orn at weddings by the bride and room. This undoubtedly arose from the fact that some high-born lady once for-got her gloves. How far this fashion will be followed it is difficult to say will be followed it is difficult to say but no doubt there are some persons who will adopt it. Sometimes the bridesmaids or maids of honor enter the church one by one from each side of the chancel, and joining in the middle aiste, walk down to meet the bride and her father. Usually, however, the ushers walk in from the front door, followed by the bridesmaids then the bride on her father's arm, the groom meanwhile entering with his best man from the chancel, and waiting there to receive the bridei party. The veil can to receive the bridai party. The veil can be so arranged that the piece which cov be so arranged that the plece which covers the face is pinned across the hair, and falls to the waist. This can easily be removed after the ceremony by one of the bridesmaids, and carried out of church over her arm. This is a more satisfactory way of arranging the veil as it is possible to turn it back gracefully over the orange blossoms.

A prayer-book is often carried by the bride instead of a bouquet, and in one instance this prayer-book was handed the officiating clergyman, who read from it the service, returning it to the bride he service, returning it to the bride afterwards. Bridesmalds and ushers do not ralk together down the aisle. It is con-idered an old-fashioned custom, and is followed. At morning weddings the bridesmaids sometimes carry para-sols, which are partly opened, and are filled with flowers. Of course, in this case, the maids wear hats.—Harper's Ba-

New York Fashious, New York Fashieus.

The latest fancy of the Faris dressmakers is for checked stiks, taffetas, or slightly heavier gros-grains, which are sometimes watered, and are always glace. The ground may be shot in two colors, as pale green and white, with fine line cross-bars of two colors, usually black and white, or else it has small blocks a third of an inch square of several colors. These sliks are made into carriage costumes for spring, completed by a little bolero of cloth when in the street; while for the house they are charmingly trimmed with a collarette or fichu of embroidered mull.

This mull embroidery is also a novelty.

med with a collarette or fichu of embroidered mull.

This mull embroidery is also a nevelty. It is fine, soft, cream-white batiste or mull exquisitely wrought in close designs of wreaths and vines, as if done by the hand of a clever needle-woman. This comes in ten or twelve-inch bands, scalloped or pointed on the lower edge, to be put on without gathers, the piain mull at the top folded across in shape, as little collets, equalettes, or bretelles, and also as bows, choux, and bretelles accompanies mull trimmites. There are also shown open-patterned embroideries on mull and on ecru batiste done in the old-time evelet work, with holes punched in and overhanded. These form the close back of boleros over silk waists, and droop in front in draped revers, or with long fichuends that lap. An edge of lace is sometimes added to the embroidered scallop.

A checked silk costume by Paquin illustrates the combination with mull. It is shot ecru, green and plum taffets in mall squares, made with an extremely wide skirt stiffened in three or four flutes at the top of the back to make the long meet folds set well, and also widely scalloped at the foot for the same reason. Small pointed basques of the slik edged with a thick cord of the same are attached to the top of the skirt below a beit of black satin ribbon two inches wide. A round waist pleated into the beit and fastened on the left side has a yoke of bias folds across the front, and a high collar and cravat bow of the black ribbon. Huge gigot sleeves have five bias folds around the lower part of the same, each tightened by a loop and a little button covered with the silk. Thus far the gown is entirely of the checked taffeta. Then embroidered cream-white mull is added below the black collar-band, forming a curving cape on the back and shoulders and pointed in front. A bolero of Havana-brown cloth completes the Sown for the street. This jacket has a round-titted back extending to the beit and straight there, while the loose, open fronts fall in tabs below the slik waist. Revers that point down rather than across and black satin ribbon loops are on the front, while across the back is a collar of three blas folds of the checked silk. An odd touch is a tuck of the cloth taken enthrely around the jacket just under the arms. The sleeves are gigots of enormous size to take in the silk sleeves of the waist without crushing them.

A home dress of taffeta is of pale blue shot with white, and barred with mere threads of black and white. The waist has a basque with four points, the fronts open in jacket fashion on a full vest of white tule starting from a large cravat bow of tulle set on a black satin ribbon collar-band. A creamy batiste collar wrought only on the edges and finished bow of tulle set on a black satin ribbon collar-band. A creamy batiste collar wrought only on the edges and finished with lace is square in the back and extends in points low in front. Straps of the silk, each end pointed and held by a cut-steel button, are on the front of the waist, the lower part of the sleeves, and around the feot of the skirt, which is five yards wide and quite long.—Harper's Bazar.

The Nutly Amateur Circus.

For the past few weeks the inhabitants For the past few weeks the inhabitants of Nutley have greeted one another with the words "Hoop la!" to which the usual and proper response has been "Hi yi!" or in some cases "Boom, tar-ra-ra, boom"—strange sounds to the uninitiated, but easily explained. Nutley was going to have a circus; and not an ordinary circus in a single sense of the word.

In the first place, the object was not to obtain money enough to "move on," neither was it to fost a lot of thirdrate performers (under stolen names) before a public drugged with peanuts and plnk lemonade. It was for a worthy pink temonade. It was for a worthy object, its inception was novel, its methods new, its details startling, its accomplishment successful. And all this was due to the way it was managed from start to finish. The press agent from start to finish. The press agent was an editor, the ring-master was another, one clown was a heavy-swell, another a painter, one bareback-rider was an electrician, the horses thoroughbreds, the performers amateurs (with one or two brilliant exceptions), and the object was to start in Franklin county, New Jersey, a branch of the Red Cross Association, that is known throughout the world. The intention of the as-sociation is to supply ready and intelli-gent assistance and succor to the sick and wounded, to provide instructions to and wounded, to provide instructions to its members by forming "emergency classes," and to be, above all, useful and practical in time of need. Every one knows the work of the Red Cross at Johnstown flood, lately on the hurricane-swept islands of the Southern coast, and in time of war, famine, and distress. Mr. H. C. Bunner, whose name and fame as an author and editor extend up and down and across this broad land, has been the press agent, and it is mostly to his untiring efforts that Nutley went circus-mad for so good a cause.-Har-per's Weekly.

The Cup of the Vigiley. The America's Cup, which our British cousins have striven with so much determination to gain, is at present the property of the New York Yacht Club. It can never come into possession of the owners of the yacht that at any time should win it; it simply becomes a trust in the hands of the club to which the yacht belongs. The members of the New York Yacht Club have therefore followed York Yacht Club have therefore followed the precedent, and have presented to the owners of the Vigilant a cup of beautiful design and workmanship to commemorate her victory over the Valkyrie.

The cup was designed and made by the Whiting Manufacturing Company, who are also makers of the Mischlef, Puritan, Mayflower, and Volunteer trophies. The Vicilant Cup, however, tops them all. It Vigilant Cup, however, tops them all. It is twenty-eight inches in height, of solid sliver, and represents two figures—one of an American Indian Princess about to let go an arrow at a foe, and of a Valkyrle, of the German legends, about to have her wear. They stand more to hurl her spear. They stand upon the base of a vase which rests upon four dolphins' heads as supports. The decorations at the side of the vase represent tions at the side of the vase represent waves lapping against a rock. The whole design is graceful and light, and one of the most beautiful yacht trophies ever produced. The modelling of the two figures is exceptionally fine.—Harper's

The Trial of the Largest Gun

The first thirteen-inch high-powered d gun completed in this country was tried at ground on Wednesday, the 21st instant. It is the largest modern gun which has been built in this country, and its trial was a complete success. The gun and mount were built at the Washington Navy-yard Ordnance Works in less than a year, and were set up at the proving-ground last week to be tested by the actual firing of a service charge and projectile. The mount, weighing about thirty-one tons, was easily transported to the proving-ground and put in place; but the moving of a thirteeninch gun, weighing sixty and a half tons was put on two car trucks of four wheels a more delicate matter. The gun was a more delicate matter. The gun each, connected by a long tie-rod, so that the distance between the trucks was about thirty feet. This length be-tween the trucks was fixed so that in running the gun upon the barge which was to take it to the proving ground its weight would be evenly brought upon the barge. On arashore, and the eighty-ton crane picked it up and safely placed it in its mount. The gun was fired with full service charge and projectile, and worked perfectly on its mount without a break.—Harner's Weekly. Harper's Weekly

OPPOSING COALITION.

THE CAROLINA POPULISTS SEEM TO HAVE CHANGED THEIR TACTION.

Marian Butler and Other Leaders of that Side Wish to Know who Invited the Republicans to Join Them.

RALEIGH, N. C., April 14.-Special .-The outlook for a coalition of the Republican and Populist forces in the next campaign is not now so promising. A change is coming over the spirit of the fusionists' dreams. By reason of the antagonistic attitude which some preminent Republican leaders have assumed toward the movement, and the indifference on the part of the Populist leaders, it now eems as if the proposed alliance of these two political organizations might be de-feated after all. The leading Republican newspaper in the State complains that there has as yet been no intimation from any source of a willingness or desire on the part of the Populists to make a combination against the Democracy. It declares that until this is done and the Populists meet them half way, there can be no deal. It intimates that even in the Ninth district, where more has been the Ninth district, where more has been done in this direction than anywhere else, the developments are doubtful. Butler, the Populist leader, referring to the matter in his paper, rises to inquire who has invited the Republicans or anybody else to fuse. He declares that the Populists have said nothing about such an alliance, and that they will make a fight against the election law, which he con-siders the leading legislative issue of the State, and will invite all who are opposed to it to join them in the fight.

SOME POLITICAL TRUTH. The truth about it is that the leaders on each side are jealous of those on the other, and both want a lion's share of the spoils. Both parties protest that they favor fusion, provided they will not have to compromise or give up their "principles."

It is believed by many of the most It is believed by many of the most prominent Democrats that the greatest darger to the party is in running three tickets, If the Populists and Republicans fuse, it is likely that the best men of both parties will assert their indepen-dence and repudlate the coalition. But in the case of three tickets, there is absolutely no hope for the Populists. A fusion this year will drive such men as John B. Eaves, Capt. H. C. Cowles, Chas. Price, Oliver H. Dockery, Judge Furches, and others, who constitute the respect-ability and brains of the party in this State, possibly entirely out of the party, and certainly from its active support. And, on the other hand, it will drive back to the Democratic party a large number who now honestly believe that under the Populist banner they are fighting for some principle. This will leave the two factions without cohesion and destitute of

ABOUT THE RESULTS.

FACTS CONCERNING THE BFFECT OF THE RECENT MODDY MEETINGS,

A Record Kept at the Y. M. C. A. Shows List of Twelve Hundred People Interesied in Religion.

The net results of the Moody meetings in Richmond will, perhaps, never be known. It is the most wide-spread religious awakening that has ever been felt in this city, and its moral influence has touched many who could not be reached through the regular church organizations by ordinary methods. As one well-known member expressed the idea: "It is too early yet to estimate the results. Perhaps elernity alone will reveal all the good done, but it is safe to say that the direct good accomplished far more than justifies the cost of the enterprise." The only direct known results of the tabernacle meetings are the records kept by the cards given at the inquiry meet-ings at the Y. M. C. A. by those who ex-pressed themselves as satisfied with their religious condition. Among these were backsliding church members and men in sin of every degree.

Twelve hundred of these cords were received at the inquiry room, besides the names and addresses of the penitents and the churches of their choice.

Some of these were visitors from the State at large, and their cards were immediately malied to the pasters of the churches named on the card. From these a large number of satisfactory answers have been received by Secretary Tibbius.
Those given by persons living in the city were distributed among the pastors of the city, and, with one notable excep-tion, they followed them up and tried to complete the work commenced in the inulry room,

About 80 of these cards have been returned to Secretary Tibbitts with satisfactory replies, most of them that the person had or would connect himself with the church of his choice. EXEPING A LIST. An alphabetical list is being kept of all those who singed the cards and those not already satisfactorily cleared from the list will be the subject of condition in the after meetings. Hundreds were convicted of their sins under the great evangelist's preaching of which no record was oftained, and many such cases have been reported. Miss Tyson's m boys and girls of full age of religious understanding were converted may also be ireladed as a result of Mr. Moody's future investigation and missionary effort

by the workers of the association.

Mr. Tibbitts used the same system folwere almost as the same system fol-lowing the Moody meetings in New York years ago, and says that the after re-suits were almost as successful as the work accomplished while the meetings

These cards only represent the inquirers who expressed satisfaction with their

were in progress.

Mr Moody's efforts were commended by the ministers of the city, and with few exceptions the committee received their cordial assistance in the work. WHAT DE, LANDRUM SAYS.

Dr. W. W. Landrum in an estimate of Mr. Moody and his visit, says:
"Moody's stay in Richmond was a 'season of refreshing from the presence of the Lord.' .. no but Moody would have received an invitation to our city have received an invitation to our easy from the ministers' meetings of every evangelical denomination? Presbyterians, Methodists, Disciples, Friends, Episco-palians, Baptists, and others warmly and encouragingly invited him. All there knew Mr. Moody to be a Congregationalist; all knew he could not possibly sup-press a Calvinistic flavor to his teach-ings on fundamental doctrine, but all ings on fundamental doctrate, but an waited on him as an expression of Protestant unity. Moody is a moving Y. M. C. A. The Y. M. C. A. largely made Moody and Moody has organized a Y. M. C. A. wherever he could possibly do so, and has helped struggling associations in hundreds of communities. Richmond owes hundreds of communities. Richmond owes him a debt of gratifude for our Y. M. C. A. on his first visit here.

"As to results, who can measure them? As to converts, who can count them? Who would presume to do such a thing? We can tell how many persons were interested in the meeting, and possibly, how many persons professed conversion, but scarcely anything beyond that. Who can know the heart? We believe hundreds will hereafter be better in home life, better fathers and mothers, better husbands and wives, better sons and daughters, better clitzens, better patriots, betters, better citizens, better patriots, better Christians because of Mr. Moody's

OPPOSE THE METHODS.

SPRING-1894

DR. CARMICHAEL WILL NOT LOOK AFTER MOODY CONVERTS.

He Returned a Card Bearing the Name of an Inquirer to Secretary Tibblits With Quite a Curt Letter.

An incident happened in connection with the 'inquiry cards,' used in the work of reclaiming sinners at the Moody meetings, which, if reports be true, will likely be productive of much feeling be-tween a prominent minister and many of the earnest Christian workers in connection with the Moody meetings and the Y. M. C. A. As has aiready been published, some of the ministers in Richmond do not endorse the methods used in the Moody meetings, and last Sunday Rev. Hartley Carmichael was quite outspoken in regard to his views on the subject, saying, among other things, "that if any of the converts came to him and wanted to join the church he would take them if they had been baptized, but he did not expect to go after

- THE CARD PEATURY. The methods adopted by the committee in regard to the converts from those meetings was to take the name of the person, his address and the church of his choice on a card, and to send the card to the paster of the church named. In due course one of these cards was mailed to Rev. Hartley Carmichael, rector of St. Paul's Episcopal church, by Secretary Tibbitts, of the Young Men's Christian Association, with a type-writ-Christian Association, with a type-writ-ten letter similar to those sent to other passors. A gentleman who claims to be acquainted with the facts states that Mr. Carmichael promptly sent a formal and not overly Christian reply, declining to take any cognizance of the card, and re-turned it to Mr. Tibbitts with his reply. It is said that the inquirer had been a member of Dr. Carmichael's church, but feeling that he had not led a consistent life, was penitent and sought the pray-ers and the assistance of the workers in the inquiry-room.

It is said that Dr. Carmichael, in his reply, referred to Mr. Tibbitts' letter as a business circular, and told him in substance that if a soul was not worth a personal letter it was not worth any effort at all; that as the paid agent of the association it was his (Tibbitts')) business to look after such things, and that he as rector was not paid to do that sor of work, and did not propose to under take it.

DR. CARMICHARL'S LETTER The letter from Dr. Carmichael created quite a flutter among the officers of the Young Men's Christian Association who are in Mr. Tibbitis' confidence, some of whom are Episcopalians and intimate with the writer.

Mr. Tibblits was very much surprised at the reception his letter received, if not hurt at the reply. Other cards were sent out from persons who expressed a preference for St. Paul's church, but they were placed in the hands of Christian workers be onging to that church, who had shown them selves to be in sympathy with the Mood;

I called on Mr. Tibbitts last evening in regard to the report of the transaction

He acknowledged having received a curt letter from Dr. Carmichael, but that the letter was not in his possession; that at the request of others he had turned it over to the officers of the association and that they might take some action in regard to it; but that it had gone out of his hands. The matter has evidently been kept very

The matter has evidently been kept very quiet, and in the interview last night Mr. Tibbitts expressed the fear that the affair would be productive of harm in Christian work in the city.

Only a few of the officers of the association and some of the more prominent workers in the Moody meetings are said to be acquainted with the result of the correspondence and the first facts in the correspondence and the first facts in the case were learned by chance from an outside source.

Mr. F. B. Jacobs.

Er, F. B. Jacobs,

The sweet singer in Issel, Mr. F. H.
Jacobs, who added so much to the Moody meetings by his sweet voice and Christian spirit, no less than the formation and conduct of the great choir, will bld farewell to his many new found friends in Richmond this afternoon.

He will leave to-morrow for Salem.
Mass., where he will organize a choir and hold preliminary revival meeting in preparation for Mr. Moody's coming a week later.

The latch string will hang outside the door of many houses in Richmond whenever he chooses to return.

Rev. George C. Needham will close the tabernacle meetings this afternoon at a o'clock, at which time he will preach to white people.
